Guten Tag!

I am pleased to announce that the new 'Crankpot Industries Educational Website' is now available to view online! My scientists have been working hard to create a website that will help children learn about science, with interesting information, exciting games and informative links.

You can also find out more about Crankpot Industries and the work of my scientists in their LABs by checking out their 'Scientist Blogs' and 'Media Libraries'

Each week the website will be added to by my scientists, and assuming all goes well and the site has been signed off by myself and my business partner Olive Stein, the updates will go live each Friday!

Olive and I would love to hear any feedback that you may have about the site, Crankpot Industries or the work of my scientists, and we would encourage you to send us an email at prof.crankpot@gmail.com.

To access the website just go to the website of our partner school at www.station.northumberland.sch.uk and follow the link.

Also don't forget to read 'The Crankpot Industries Chronicle', which my scientists will bring home every Thursday, for further information about what is happening here at Crankpot Industries!

Auf Wiedersehen!
